Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

from Eric, Jale, Andri and Christopher.

Dear Ursel! I wish you a happy holiday season and a happy new year. The bed jacket is a gift for you, I wore it when I was in the hospital, but not since then, and I haven't washed it. I thought that you might be able to use it. If you don't want it, give it to Christel or Mother. Otherwise, Andri takes care of him every time he just hears him, then his whole face lights up. Andri also spends a lot of time with him; when he wants something to drink, or to eat, he always takes care of everything, right down to the serious things. He gives him his toy back when he drops it, shoves the bottle back into his throat when he loses it, and will soon be fingering his fur. He loves to lick the table. Lately, he always wants to be on the phone. It hurts him when he leaves the room or dusts. It is also a great risk, what he cannot yet say. He nibbled on a victim of a pinecone to show what the squirrel does. Now he takes a nap with his big but quiet parents every week. He is fed more, frozen and experiences the whole year again. As soon as we can, we'll also buy a goose or a duck with a somewhat sharper "disgust," cherry or Rell, that's a good riddle. Best regards, Your Uncle.
